

FRANZ WASSERMANN,

born in 1963, lives and works as a sculptor in Vienna. He is concerned with structures of power in our society and explores the coming and going of power and powerlessness that influences the individual as well as the collective. His performances and sculptures deal with tabooed issues like for example sexual abuse of children (SCARS), National Socialism and culture of remembrance (TEMPORARY MONUMENT), Aids and stigma (BARBIE + KEN = HIV+), migration (ADMINISTRATIVE DETENTION OF ASYLUM SEEKERS), authority and symbolic capital in the cultural sector (ALBERTINA, ICONS) and the power of the media and the image (ACTION CARRIERS).

Wassermann makes these topics visible in public space and starts dialogues to which he reacts by means of art and which become parts of his work. Therefore, the artist cooperates with different partners e.g. the public, associations, activists, companies and experts from other fields of knowledge. The traces of these dialogues are presented in the gallery space as object, videos, photos and prints where they initiate a second kind of discussion.

"Franz Wassermann is constantly examining the ever-shifting relationship between the individual and the collective. The behaviour of a majority towards a minority, or a collective toward a single person, suggests a power game that is never simple or clear, a struggle that throws into high relief the illogical logic of how supremacy is maintained. Since the powerful are most often the writers of human history, such unpopular chapters usually never see the light of day. Wassermann's projects are testaments to his insistence that neglected narratives must be seen and heard, and when taken as a whole attest to his oeuvre's unerring accuracy in conceptualizing and visualizing such cultural silences."
